Water Demand Management in a Changing Climate, Water Scarcity Workshop, call for participation, Birmingham, UK

The demand for water is a fundamental control on strategic planning and investment by every water company. We need to balance supply and demand. However demand management is no longer simply the 'predict' element of a 'predict and provide' water management strategy but is one element – water efficiency and demand constraint - of the twin track approach to managing future water scarcity now advocated by the regulator. Assessing water demand in a country where the majority of homes are unmetered is
